You may have to make some changes to the thesis if requested by the examiners. The doctoral advisor will review the final version of the dissertation. When your advisor has completed his/her review he/she will advise you that the work can be printed. After submitting the required copies to the University Library, the university library will then send four copies for examination to the doctoral advisor. Following a review of the finished thesis, the doctoral advisor sends an approved copy to the Chair of the doctoral committee. The Dean's office then produces the doctoral certificate.
